Army Base Blast In Britain Kills 7; IRA Says It Did It

By Bernard D. Nossiter

ALDERSHOT, England, Feb. 22 (WP).-IRA bombers brought their terror to the outskirts of greater London today, blowing up a paratroops' officers mess and killing seven persons at the huge base here.

The victims were five waitresses, one civilian worker and a Roman Catholic chaplain who had just been decorated for his efforts at peacemaking in Ulster.

Nixon and Chou Meet 4 Hours in New Talks

Appear Jovial, Friendly

PEKING, Feb. 22.—President Nizon and Premier Chou En-lai got down to talks today on the issues that sharply divide the United States and China,

They met for three hours and 50 minutes in the second round of discussions Mr. Nixou has had with China's leaders since he ar-rived here yesterday for his eight-

The length of the session indicated that the 59-year-old President and the 73-year-old premier may have plunged into the heart of discussion to span the gulf left by their nations' 22 years of hostility. Mr. Nixon had said before arriving that he expected his meetings with Mr. Chou would last two hours.

Yesterday, Mr. Nixon and Mr Chou held a largely ceremonial meeting in the Great Hall of the People. Today the meeting room was small, Mr. Chou and Mr. Nixon faced each other across a rectangular table only a few feet wide.

Mr. Nixoo was accompanied only by Henry A. PARADISE VALLEY, Ariz. Feb. 22 (Reuters).—Architect William Wesley Peters said today that his wife, Svetlang, daughter of the late Soviet dictator Joseph Stalin, had walked out on me" and taken their 10-month-old daughter. Mr. Peters, 59, and Svetlana, who will be 46 on Monday, were married 22 months ago. It was Mr. Peters's second marriage and Svetlana's fourth—the first two ended in divorce and her third husband, an Indian prince named Brijesh Singh, died in November, 1966. Mr. Peters's first wife, also named Svetlana, died with her 2-year-old son in a car crash in 1946.

Mr. Peters, son-in-law of the late architect Frank Lloyd Wright, told of the marital breakup in an interview today. Svetlana, who defected to the United States in 1967, was unavailable for comment, but she was reported to have told a friend that she left her husband because she didn't like the communal-type of living at Talicsin West here. "That's why I left Russia," she was quoted as saying.

Tallesin West, 20 miles uortheast of Phoenix, is the headquarters for the Frank Lloyd Wright Foundation, an architectural school and practicing architectural firm.

'Bloody Sunday' Probe Hears Testimony of Army Brutality

COLERAINE, Northern Ireland, Lord Widgery, England's Lord 'eb. 22 (Reuters).—The one-man Chief Justice. Feb. 22 (Reuters).—The one-man tribunal probing the 13 killings in Londonderry's "Bloody Sonday" civil rights demonstration was told today that British paratroopers had clubbed people to the ground with rifle butts and then kicked them.

This testimony was given by press photographer Geoff Morris, of the London Daily Mail, in the second day of the official inquiry into the shootings conducted by

The one officer killed, Chaplain Gerry Weston, 38, is thought to have just emerged from his car when the explosion went off. A captain, only days ago, he was awarded a decoration, Member (of the order) of the British Empire for gallantry in Belfast. He was cited for his unescorted visits to Catholic ghettoes where he had sought to hear Catholic grievances against the troops.

The Official wing of the IRA was quick to claim credit for the assault. In a statement issued from its Dublin headquarters, the organization first said:

"A unit of the Official IRA carried out a successful retaliatory operation at the headquarters of the 16th Parachute Brigade at Aldershot. . . The operation, which resulted in the deaths of several officers of the brigade, was carried out as a reprisal for the murderous killings by troops under the command of this brigade when they fired without provocation on unarmed civilians in Derry."

Less than an hour later, as word of the real death list filtered across the Irish Sea, the Officials issued a second statement:

The tribunal also heard eyewitness accounts from other press and television representatives. Mr. Morris reported that people had run off with the paratroopers in pursuit. He said he saw pairs of paratreopers clubbing people over the head with their rifles and then kicking them when they fell to the ground.

Two of the soldiers had seized him and be'd him against a wall with a rifle butt at the back of his head, he added. When he reached for his press card he was kneed in the groin, he said.

The photographer said he was thrown to the ground when he tried to take a picture of a paratrooper hitting a running man in the face with his rifle butt. An-other paratrooper beside him went into a crouching position and fired two shots. Later, he said he saw a young man being dragged away by two soldiers one of whom hit him over the head from behind.

A British Broadcasting Corp. reporter, David Capper, testified that the first shot he heard seemed to come from a crowd in the Catholic Bogside district. Later, he saw about 2,000 people running with two armored vehicles on their heels. As soon as the vehicles stopped soldiers began firing but it was his impression that rubber bullets and CS gas were being used.

Beyond Comprehension Mr. Capper told Lord Widgery was only later he realized that live bullets were being used that afternoon. Asked why he thought the army was not using live bullets, he replied: "I could not see any reason for it. It was beyond my comprehension that they were doing it." A British Broadcasting Corp. television cameraman testified at the same hearing that paratroopers appeared to come under fire as they charged the demonstrators.

The witness, Peter Beggin said under cross-examination that he had no evidence as to who fired the ahots, although be thought they came from the direction of high-rise apartments in Bogside.

The room has 22 rows of white-linencovered tables with exactly 154 seats-precisely the number of American and foreign newsmen accredited to cover the visit.

Along the sides of the room there are a series of smaller screened-off areas, including a small TV studio, an office for the White House press staff, another for information officials of the Chinese Foreign Ministry and separate compartments for cable and long-distance telephone.

On the floor of the working area itself there are ten soundproof booths for radio and television newsmen, equipped with complex voice circuits and small Japanese-made television monitors, keyed into the pictures being relayed to the special prosdeast center at Peking airport by camera teams around the city.

Case Against Philip Berrigan Is Based on Informer's Story

(NYT).—The government said yesterday that its conspiracy case against the Rev. Philip F. Berri-gan and six other anti-war act-ivists is based on the word of an informer, Boyd F. Douglas ir. a former convict who has served seven years in federal prisons.

Chief prosecutor William S. Lynch said in an opening statement that Douglas supplied the Federal Bureau of Investigation with copies of alleged messages exchanged between Mr. Berrigan while he was in federal prison at Lewisburg, Pa., and members of his group outside.

The prosecutor said these messages showed Mr. Berrigan was the leader of a conspiracy to kid-nap presidential aide Henry A. Klasinger, to blow up the heating systems of government buildings in Washington, and to raid draft boards in several cities.

Mr. Lynch's outline of the government's case was promptly as-sailed by his one-time superior, former Attorney General Ramsey Clark, who is a defense attorney.

Mr. Clark charged that the defendants are being prosecuted partly to stifle the peace move-ment and partly to "justify a leak" by FBI Director J. Edgar

Mr. Hoover spoke of the alleged plot at a congressional hearing on Nov. 27, 1970, before the indictments were handed down. "Of course we know Henry Kis-singer wasn't kidnapped," Mr. Clark said. "He is alive and well in Peking today."

You will see that there is no conspiracy, no agreement, no plan to kidnap Henry Kissinger plan to Ridnap Henry Kissinger or sayone else," Mr. Clark told the jury. "There was no con-spiracy, no agreement, no con-tract, no plan to bomb anything. These defendants are the gent-lest of people, not capable of in-juring anyone."

Personal Reply Refused

Mr. Berrigan asked to make a personal reply to the govern-ment's opening. He brought to written statement reviewing his "nonviolent" actions against the war including the destruction of draft records at Baltimore and Catonsville, Md., for which he is serving what he called "an extravagant and vindictive sentence of six years."

District Judge R. Dixon Herman refused to let Mr. Berrigan speak, observing that the priest is represented by Mr. Clark. Then Mr. Berrigan offered to dismiss the former attorney general and represent himself.

When the judge again refused. Leonard Boudin, another defense ey, moved for a Mr. Boudin contended that Mr. Berrigan was being denied constitutional and statutory rights to represent himself.

Alleged Supplier of Heroin In U.S. Case Held in Paris

PARIS, Feb. 23 (AP).—A Frenchman who allegedly sup-plied $12 million worth of pure heroin to be smuggled into the United States by Roger Delouette, now held in a New Jersey jail, has been arrested in Paris, it was announced here tonight.
France's central narcotics squad arrested Dominique Mariani, alias Malard, a known criminal aged 30, three days ago, a squad spokesman announced.

He said Mr. Mariani supplied 44.5 kilos of pure heroin to Mr. Delouette and ordered him to take it to Port Elizabeth, N.J. The drug's resale value would have been some $12 million. It was discovered concealed in a mimbus on a Port Elizabeth dock and Mr. Delouette was arrested last April 5.

The case led to a major row tween the United States and France on two counts. Mr. De-louette claimed his boss was a senior officer of a French secret service, Col. Paul Fournier. And U.S. Attorney Herbert J. Stein. of Newark, alleged that French authorities failed to respond to his efforts to get them to move against Col. Fournier.

Luna-20 was launched Feb. 14 and went into moon orbit last Saturdoy. It was the first an-nounced Soviet ottempt to soitland a capsule on the moon since the Lung-18 failure.

Rugged Areas

Soviet ground control lost contact with Luna-18 at the moment of touchdown in the Apollonius Mountains, one of the most rugged areas of the hunar surface, Luna-19, launched Sept. 23, remained in moon orbit, studying radiation and magnetism and photographing the moon's surface. Soviet reports indicated it was not a soft-lander. Speculation that Lung-20 could be a moon scooper was backed by the mission of Luna-16, which soft-landed in September, 1970, then rocketed back home with lunar soil samples it had drilled. The moon-scooping operation was not announced until Luna-16 was en route to earth. The eight-wheeled Lunokhod-1 robot was ferried to the moon in November, 1970, by Luna-17. It provied the Sea of Rains for 10 months—photographing, map-ping, testing soil density and doing chemical soil analysis.

Soviet scientists have said a more sophisticated generation of Lunckhods is being developed to expand the Soviet program of unmanned lunar exploration.

NEW YORK (NYT) -The 1963 Nobel Prize in physics honored three researchers. Half the $51,-000 prize money went to Dr. Eugene P. Wigner for describing the interaction of protons and neu-trons that make up the nuclei of atoms; the other half was shared by Dr. Mayer and Dr.

J. Hans D. Jensen, Fliteen years earlier, when she was a professor at the University of Chicago, and he was at the University of Heidelberg, they had independently worked out an explanation, called a shell model, for the way in which nuclei absorb neutrons in high-energy physics. They subsequently met in 1950 and jointly wrote a book on their

Dr. Mayer recalled later that she had been discussing her theories with Enrico Fermi in 1948 when his telephone rang. Before arswering it, he asked, "incidentally, is there any indication of spin-orbit coupling?"

"When he said it, it all fell into place. In 10 minutes, I knew," she said. Her explanation was that a measured spin of a nuclear particle could correspond to one of two different orbits. This made possible a description of the nucleus in terms of orbits of single particles.

Dr. Mayer and Dr. Jensen faced considerable skepticism at first, but as he wrote her: "You have convinced Fermi, and I have con-vinced (Dr. Werner) Heisenberg. What more do we want?"

As an undergraduate, she shifted her interest from mathematics to physics in the late 1920s when quantum mechanics was coming into its own. Dr. Mayer spent a term at another creative center, Cambridge University, but returned to Goettingen to take her dectorate in 1930.

In that year, she was married to an American graduate student. Dr. Joseph Edward Mayer, who had been doing chemical physics at Goettingen on a Rockefeller fellowship. At Johns Hopkins University, where they spent the next nine years, she kept up with her field as a voluntary associate. She was naturalized in 1933.

While they were in New York, Mrs. Mayer lectured at Columbia University and Sarah Lawrence College and did wartime research in the SAM Laboratories under Dr. Harold Urey.

In 1960, the Mayers joined the faculty of the University of California at San Diego, he in the chemistry department and she in physics. Even before the Nobel Prize, public recognition had come to her in the form of honorary degrees from Russell Sage, Smith and Mount Holyoke Colleges.

JERUSALEM, Feb. 22 (UPD .do not expect any breakthrough toward Middle East peace to emerge from the visit Friday of UN special envoy Gunnar V.

A Foreign Ministry statement announcing that the visit was set for Friday made it clear Mr. Jarring invited himself, "Ambassador Gunnar Jarring bas proposed to come to Israel on Fri-day. The foreign minister has accepted this proposal," the statement said.

The Intacli radio reported Mr. Jarring will be only a few hours in Israel. It gave no source for the report.

[In New York a UN spokesman said Mr. Jarring will visit Amman tomorrow for talks with the Jordanian government before going to Jerusalem, Reuters reported.

[The spokesman said the envoy would report to UN Secretary-General Kurt Walhelm in Geneva next Stinday or Monday.] Official sources said his talks will not move higher than Foreign Ministry level. He will not meet Premier Golda Meir, who is on a short vacation, they said.

The official statement said Foreign Minister Abba Eban and Mr. Jarring will meet Friday morning. Israel's ambas-sador to the UN, Joseph Tekoah, and Foreign Ministry officials also will attend.

LONDON, Feb. 22 (1HT)—Sir Moscow Rabbi 1s To Be KGB Agent

TEL AVIV, Feb. 23 (NYT).-Union said in Jerusalem yesterday that Soviet authorities were planning to install a KGB (secret police) agent as chief rabbl of Moscow in place of the late Yehuda Leib Levin.

The refugees, who called a news conference, identified the Kremlin's choice as Rabbi Yisrael Schwartzbiatt, of Odessa. They said he had been folsted on Odessa about a decade ago by the authorities and had served them faithfully.

He was said to have had a prison record for theft but to have been pardoned years ago to inflitrate the rabbinate as an informer.

The refugee rabbis acknowleg-ed the late Rabbi Levin himself had sometimes cooperated with the Soviet authorities but they said he could not have survived otherwise. The proposed successor, however, was not merely a collaborator but a planted agent, they claimed.

The rabbi of Moscow is to be chosen formally by a committee of 20 synagogue officials. However, a commissar for religious matters is expected to instruct them whom to pick Rabbi Levin had often been cri-ticized by Israeli rabbis for statements supporting the Soviet regime, but his authority in mat-ters of Torah (religious law) has not been questioned. His conversions and divorces were recognized by Israeli rabbis. Rabbi Schwartzblatt was also said to be deficient in Torah knowledge.

Cairo Court Told Bodyguards May Have Killed Tell

CAIRO, Feb. 22 (UPI).-Defense lawyers for four Pales-tinians accused of killing Jordanian premier Wasti Tell said today that one of his personal bodyguards may have assessmated the premier.

The defense argued before a state security court that the four are innocent of the charge of gunning down Mr. Tell in Cairo in November, even though the defendants themselves have admitted it. The lawyers told the court that official medical reports on the killing show Mr. Tell was shot with a gun other than those carried by the accused. Attorney Ahmed Shukeiri called for Abdel Khalek Hassouns, secretary-general of the Arab League, to testify. He said Mr. Hassouns could produce documents which show the "treachery" of the Jordanian regime toward the Arab cause.

The film version is not the same as the stage production for many reasons—not the least being that Brook believes that any stage production is out of date after five years. In the United States this deliberately bleak, unheroic motion picture has received some surprisingly virulent criticism.

Critics

The usually admirably hard-nosed Pauline Kael incredibly misses the "fetry-tale grandenc that she claims this greatest of tragedies possesses, while John Simon claimed that Brook whitewashed" Goneril by not portray-ing her as an evil fiend from the start. In fact, says Brook, there is nothing inherently wrong with Goneril's first speech ("Sir, I love you more than words can wield the matter") though we later see she is a monster-but a real monster, both complex and compelling."

"The real humanity of the play is that while there's no condoning of evil, there's no reason to label thines

"Why should I impose a moral on Shakespeare? It's a highly moral play in the most profound

As a man of the theater, reactions are all-important to Brook, so he chooses, sitting there on the floor, to give a brief disquisition on the filming of "Lear," beginning with general attitudes to Shakespearean tragedy, the Act-ing the King of which Miss Kael's "fairy-tale grandeur" is fairly symptomatic.

'In America there is a strongly entrenched view of what Shakespeare's universe should look like and there is a fairly arbitrary, very sentimental academic notion of what is uplifting. It's a sort of prize-day notion of what is poetic."

Decadence

There is also a mysterious certainty about what Snakespeare means (an angry letter to The New York Times accused Brook of wrenching "King Lear' away from Shakespeare's intended context and meaning"):
"How much I envy those critics for knowing what Tear is about," Peter Brook says. "Tve done a film and a play to try to find

Fighting what he calls the sentimental conception of tragic grandeur, Brook says, "There's a I think is a horrid one, a part of theatrical degeneracy. It's how uplifting tragedy is. You see the horrors and come away feel-ing good, you see the massacres on stage and say, wasn't it beautiful." An example Brook gives is Alain Resnais's film, "Nuit et Brouillard," in which graphic Brook's film of "King Lear" was shot in northern Denmark, a choice, he says, that was fun-damental. "Out of this came the whole film... the thumbprint of the production.

The period of Lear is olden days. For Shakespeare, the past. There is an operatic, Wagnerian convention that olden days means vast open spaces, great heroes. Through pushing this view to an extreme come the great Eisen-stein movies, which like anything

But if you read Lear Eisenstein's way you find great parts you can't play—the marvel of espeare's ever-shifting world is that a man at one second is feet high and the next second he's leaning over a bar and waving a finger at you. And he's the Lapp clothes were used as cosstory high because of the howling winds and marshy land. Key words—cold and warm, covered and uncovered, protected and unprotected, seeing and blind-took a meaning from the world around.

Domesticity

What we tried was to make this barbaric world real by find-ing its proper domesticity. This was a great satisfaction to some people, a dissatisfaction to others who wanted something great and oversized, like book illustrations." Next came the problem of the film's style. "It's nearly impossible to make a Shakespeare film.

"Women in Bevolt," a "comedy" by Andy Warhol can be "more accurately described as a madcap soap opera," says Vincent Canby. It is reminiscent of Hollywood movies of the 1930s and 1940s—"especially those slushy romances in which Alice Faye, Frances Langford and Patsy Kelly compromised everything except their virtue in their pursuit of husbands." But the three heroines are played by female impersonators—which, Camby thinks, may be interpreted as the ultimate put-down of wom-en's lib, as well as its ultimate ment." Compared to other Warhol movies this one is "not as consistently funny (and awful) as "Trash," but a lot of it is as dirty as it is funny. I have no idea who is responsible for the dialogue, which often is foolish and occasionally inspired in the way that good parodies must be."

PARIS NIGHTLIFE Jeanmaire, Roland Petit Rejuvenate Music Hall

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss DARIS, Feb. 22 (IRT).-Roland Petit's new revue, "Zizi, Je TAime," which opened to rigorous applause at the Casino de Paris last night, is a splendid spectacle. Meanwhile, Back in Moscow...

Since much of the world is playing guessing games about President Nixon's visit to Peking, it is hardly surprising that the Soviet Union should be, in effect, doing the same. The official Kremlin line is as coldly correct as the Chinese reception of the American President at the Peking airport. The Soviet government does not object to rapprochement between the United States and the People's Republic, provided this is not at the expense of the Soviet Union. Apparently, however, there is a lurking suspicion that Moscow may be footing the bill for the Sino-American feast.

At any rate, the Moscow press has been giving great play to the adverse comments of Communist papers and personalities in Other countries on the Nixon journey, while keeping its own coverage of the event itself to a minimum. Two Izvestia sentences on the presidential party's arrival in China, coupled with 10 times that space devoted to the meeting of the Communist party in Brooklyn, would seem to indicate that some misgivings are deflecting the news judgment of Izvestia's editors.

Not that the arrival of Gus Hall and his Communist cohorts on bourgeois Brooklyn Heights, to foregather in a hotel that has traditionally housed that region's more respectable widows and retired gentlemen, is wholly without sociological interest. But it is at most a minor note in the process of social change-comparable, perhaps, to the departure of the Brooklyn Dodgers for California. The Communist party in the United States is politically irrelevant, except to J. Edgar Hoover and Izvestia.

It would be unfortunate if the Soviet Union were to take the loval outcries of its allies abroad against the Nixon trip as seriously as the prominence it has accorded them by press and radio would seem to indicate. They reflect the true situation about as accurately as the protests of the right-wing American

For the United States has still many vital common interests with the Soviet Union -more, in fact, than those which Mr. Nixon is exploring with Chairman Mao and Premier Chou. These interests can hardly be jeopardized by any agreement reached in Peking, Rather, such agreement could only reinforce the aim that all the three great powers profess: peaceful coexistence.

The drama investing the Sino-American colloquies does not affect this basic fact. After all, Chinese Communist troops were fighting American soldiers in Korea 20 years ago, while the last time Russians encountered Americans in the field was the meeting of the two armies in Germany to celebrate a common victory. It is a good deal easier to bridge the Elbe than the Yalu, and if the latter can be accomplished it calls for some jubilation. But in essence, the need of the world is for a reasonable degree of collaboration among all powers, great and small; and particularly among the Soviet Union, the People's Republic of China and the United

Cold War Environment

Despite a reported agreement that would and at the top of its agenda is an East Gerpermit limited East German participation in a European environmental conference at Belgrade next month, cold war politics continues to threaten the larger United Nations Conference on the Human Environment scheduled for Stockholm in June, This should not-and need not-be permitted to happen.

From the time Sweden first proposed the major international conference three years ago, planning went forward with unusual manimity, spurred by a growing recognition of the menace of planetary pollution of all types and of the urgent need for global countermeasures. The harmony that had characterized this promising exercise in international cooperation was shattered last December, however, when the General Assembly rejected a Soviet proposal to permit universal participation and adopted instead a Western-sponsored resolution limiting participation to members of the United Nations and its specialized agencies

Because this formula admitted West Germany, a member of Unesco, but not East Germany, which belongs neither to the UN nor to the specialized agencies, the Soviet Union and its allies have boycotted subsequent preparatory meetings and have threatened not to attend the Stockholm conference at all.

The most practical way to clear the Stockholm environment of this cold war pollution would be to allow full East German participation by admitting East Germany to one of the specialized agencies before Stockholm convenes. The World Health Organization is scheduled to meet in May, man application for admission which has been deferred for two years.

East Germany's admission to WHO, as also East German participation at Stockholm, has thus far been blocked on the ground that such action would enhance the status of East Germany and give away an important West German bargaining chip in current negotiations. This Western standard gives too little weight to the overriding importance of universal :cooperation in environmental controls; and unduly exaggerates an issue that is well on the way toward resolving itself. Communist China's admission to the UN last year has greatly enhanced prospects for early admission of the divided countries, including East Germany.

Seven years ago, recognizing the necessity for Chinese involvement in any meaningful worldwide arms control effort, the General Assembly invited "all countries" to join worldwide disarmament conference. China declined and the conference was never held, but the principle of seeking universal participation in deliberations on issues of "paramount importance" to mankind was estab-

Environmental control is such an issue, demanding the widest possible participation, especially of such highly industrialized nations as East Germany, which is critically situated in the heart of Europe. Politics must not be permitted to obstruct international efforts to deal with one of the most fundamental—and universal—questions facing the world today.

Nixon's Reception in Peking

The reception President Nixon was given in Peking was cool and correct. It would have been surprising if it had been otherwise ... but while cordiality, which is a symptom of friendship, was lacking, the political importance Peking attaches to the visit was underlined in the most spectacular way through the immediate meeting of President Nixon with Mao Tse-tung.

-From Paese Sera (Rome). * * *

Whatever its motives-electioneering, economic, political or military strategy—the event goes beyond the immediate interests of the countries concerned. It gives rise to hope for a better world, finally governed by justice, the only force which can guarantee true peace for mankind.

-From Appenire (Rome).

President Nixon meets Chairman Mao Tsetung for an hour's unplanned talk soon after landing in China. This is a success in his pursuit of the quiet diplomacy.

As a realist, the President has no need to worry about the absence of fanfares and multi-gun salutes. He knows that fireside chats are much more important than firework parties. And he is able to "get down to cases" right at the start of his mission. The significance of this will not be lost on the Russian leaders in the Kremlin.

From the Daily Express (London).

After Korea and Vietnam, all who put peace before politics must welcome President Nixon's mission to reach an accommodation with China in Southeast Asia. The danger in this presidential election year is that the Americans, who have always been fascinated by China, will begin to find the dour Rusmans, the hard-working Japanese and the inefficiently democratic Indians rather a

> -From the Daily Mail (London). * * *

However cordial the talks in Peking, the immediate results are unlikely to be very dramatic. This doesn't matter very much. What does matter is that contact has been made where there was no contact.

China and America may not be buddles yet or anything like it. But they are no longer glaring at each other across a barrier of mutual incomprehension and misunderstanding. The Peking meeting is a very welcome piece of trail-blazing.

A Job That Has to Be Done

DACCA, Bangladesh. — Diplomats stationed in Asia are saying to each other nowadays that the Indian subcontinent's traumatic experience, including Pakistan's mass slaughter of Bengalis here and its subsequent defeat by India, proved three things: that Russia can be trusted, that America cannot be trusted, and that China need not

This is more a contemporary bon mot of the kind diplomats like to specialize in than an accurate historical summation. Nevertheless there isn't the slightest doubt that the reputation of the United States for at a new low in India and nonexistent in the government of the 75 million inhabitants of Bangladesh. As for Pakistan—the socalled Western wing left over from what was never anything more than a boastful geographical expression—the regime likes Washington but could easily switch with events.

After all, President Bhutto was once renowned as a Yankeebaiter. If the time comes, as it probably will, when Washington refuses him arms and massive aid, he may resume old habits. The popular trend is not running our way anywhere in this im mense area of three-quarters of a billion people. There is even a sizable slice of extreme leftwing opinion in Pakistan, above all in the Pathan and Baluchi provinces, that is by no means in

Russian Smiles

This is especially sad for Americans who, unlike the British, would rather be loved than respected. At this moment and in this area we are neither loved nor respected and the Russians are wreathed in smiles at their current acclaim. Furthermore, after Uncle Sam has poured much more money into this part of the world than he invested in the entire Marshall Plan, he must feel particularly rueful at contemplating the wreckage.

Indian newspapers lambast the United States every day and Indian officials dribble out the snide remarks for which they have a special talent. People once known as firm friends of America are now proving their patriotism by vicious attacks. In Pak-istan there is of course considerable sympathy for and gratitude for U.S. help in the recent fil-fated war but people cannot help but note the assistance here little fruit.

And in Bangladesh, the victim of that special kind of unbelievable savagery which can suddenly storm like a monsoon through this region, Americans are individually liked by the good-natured Bengalis but the U.S. government is detested. The brutality let loose here was at least equal to that of 1947 when British India was partitioned amid torrents of blood. When these people are angry they slaughter each other in unimaginable ways which is all one can say of the horrors committed bere by Pakistani troops.

The fact that the U.S. government made no protest and at the same time continued a one-shot weapons program to rearm Pakistan, is held in normal contempt in India and Bangladesh. A wellknown telegram of protest at American policy was sent by the members of the U.S. Consulate-General staff here to the State Department,

It is obvious that President Nixon did everything possible to prepare a favorable ground for his China visit and that Pakistan was well-viewed by Peking. But now the trip is on; what will come will come; and American policy must speedily rectify the loopsided situation prevailing in this region. Nixon himself acknowledged ear-lier this month that, "We have under study our whole relationship with the subcontinent"

Financial generosity is not enough. We are going to have to grant diplomatic recognition to Bangladesh which is a political reality of that images reality—and the sconer the better. Increly its reflection.

We are going to have to retilt policy sufficiently to appear at least objective. And we are going to have to cultivate the amour propre of all three nations in this area with some serious diplomatic huckstering, dispatching eminent, likable and cultivated leaders to visit these parts. Even in realpolitik and the conceptual approach to power balances it is necessary to honor the old-fashioned virtues of kindness, mercy, sympathy which are those American society is taught to honor and appear to have been lacking. 'It is essential that when we set about polishing our image we pay attention to rectifying the reality of that image and not

LONDON.—Do the British care about Ireland? And if they do not, what does this fact tell us about the British, about hisbory, and about the postwar world? RABAT, Morocco.—Twice & week, on Wednesdays and Saturdays, Libya's revolutionary endum March 1. government takes to the airwayes in a propaganda war with King The country's youth, those un-Hassan II of Morocco.

The Libyans, who overthrew their own king in September, 1969, carry on an hour's distribe that is clearly heard here despite efforts to jam it. Libya's leader, Col. Moamer Mohammed Qadhafi, who seems to want to bear the whole weight of the Moslem world on his shoulders, first manifested his dislike of the Moroccan monarchy last July when, without waiting to see how it would turn out, he halled the bloody military coup launched against Hassan during the latter's birthday party. The coup failed and relations between the two "Arab brothers" were sus-

The radio attack began last The Moroccan government tried vainly to use the good offices of Tunisia and the Arab League to stop them. Mindful that the effort to stir up trouble had a receptive audience among Moroccan youth, which is in-creasingly hostile to the monarchy, the government began to answer back last week in a pro-gram beamed at the home audience as well as at Libya.

New Referendum

The broadcast began with some barks followed by a speaker saying "throw Qadhafi a bone." This is a particularly insulting way for one Arab to tell another to shut up. An old Arab saying. The dogs bark but the caravan passes was quoted to show that Libya's attacks were really of no importance. But ever since his narrow escape last summer, Hassan has been trying to tame the opposition at bome with various reforms. Lest week he made his biggest effort to date with the der 21, form half of the population and a large part of it refuses to be reconciled to what students refer to in tracts as "a reactionary, repressive regime." In the bigh schools and universities, it is not easy to find support for Hassan even though this relatively privileged part of the population comes mostly from middle and upper class families. The students are at present on another of the stikes that peri-odically shut down the schools in protest against study conditions, lack of job opportunities and a system that is not alleviating poverty and ignorance very fast When students are asked what they think of the proposed constitution they invariably respond

"What we want is no monarchy at all," one said. Such talk could be heard long before Libys began its radio attacks and the feeling is that since the nearly successful coup, it has become more gen-

The population over 21, those who vote, is about 80 percent Uliterate. Again it is being asked to pass judgment by yes of no on such a sophisticated matter as a constitutional text. The lengthy analyses one reads in the press here on the relative merits of the 1962, 1970 and 1972 only to a highly restricted group of people.

The older generation, it is generally agreed, still believes in the monarchy if not necessarily in the present king. The leaders of the two major political parties, the traditionalist and middle class Istiqual and the leftist National Union of Popular Forces, recognize this sentiment.

Retains Powers Neither party has ever called for anything but a constitutional monarchy although the Union of Popular Forces has a strong wing that has republican sentiments. The leaders want a king that reigns but does not rule and after months of consultation with him they thought they had an agreement with him on that point. But the new text that emerged from the palace made it clear that Hassan, however much he wanted party cooperation, was not yet prepared to yield all his power. He gave up most of his decree-making powers to the government and shared his power to initiate constitutional amend-ments with parliament. But he kept his right to name the entire government, to dissolve the chamber and to rule alone in an emergency. parties have reacted negatively, but in opposition for 10 years and hungry for power, they have not completely closed the door to an agreement.

Thursday night when he announced the referendum in a television and radio broadcast, the king made frequent references to his "dear people." used to say "faithful people," but word reached him that some of the so-called faithful were adding a line to make a rhymed couplet in Arabic that meant "faithful people, eat dry bread."

The economy has been expanding in recent years at an annual rate of 5 percent, but the distri-bution of wealth is lopeded and everyone agrees that too many people are eating dry bread. The exposure of widespread corrup-tion in government, even though the king has energetically tried to stamp it out by bringing wrongdoers to trial, has added to the feeling that privilege is inherent in the system. The parties are pushing pro-grams of economic and social reform and are anxious to get into government to apply them. But they now must decide whether the new institutions that Hassan is proposing are any better than the old ones and will give them enough leeway to act. As for Hassan, it is apparent that he is trying to keep his throne by giving up some of his power. But the question remains whether he has given up enough to reconcile his not part of our colonial past— or rather, it is, but of a colonial past so long ago that such feelings can hardly be operative over it. The desire to be quit at all costs of the responsibilities the province lays upon us is part of a deeper malaise; the feeling that it is time no British soldiers were being shot at anywhere in the world, time nobody was accusing Britain of anything, time to forget about the pain and the ugliness, time to lie down and go to sleep. But the pain and the ugliness are part of the world, and part of us, and if Northern Ireland, and the British response to it, suggest that we want to turn our backs on the world of which we are indissolubly part, then we are in very great danger. And if we lie down and go to

Irving's Talents

It is ironic indeed that the Hughes "memoir" hoax, might prove to be the most financially rewarding literary venture for Clifford Irving. And for a few other people. In the News of the World—the newspaper claiming the largest circulation in the world, there is an "expusive" world, there is an "exclusive" story entitled "Hoar Anthor Was My Lover." If this goes on Mr. Irving can well emerge as not only a highly intelligent author. but a sexual giant as well

Mr. Irving's intelligence lies in the fact that his "affair" evokes grudging admiration of millions of houset people: No one got really hurt, and the whole thing was a lot of fun.

Soviets Seek $1 Billion Aid From Japan

Loan Would Finance Trans-Siberia Pipeline

TOKYO, Feb. 22 (AP-DJ).— The Soviet Union has asked Japan to provide hank loans totaling at least $1 billion at 6 percent interest to help finance a proposed trans-Siberian oil pipeline, Japanese officials said

The request was made at the opening day of the fifth joint session of the non-governmental Japan-Soviet Economic Committee meeting here.
The officials, who are connected with the current pro-ceedings, said the Russians also told the Japanese that between 25 million and 40 million metric tons of crude oil could be supplied to Japan each year through the proposed pipeline over a period of 20 years.

The oil would come from the Tyumen oil fields, located just east of the Ural mountains. Recoverable reserves at these fields is 7 billion tons, the Russians said, with current production 42 million tons a year.

They listed the sulphur content of this oil at between 0.9 and 1.6 percent.

The Russians also said that immediate permission could be granted for a Japanese inspec-tion mission to visit the Tyumen fields the officials said. Pre-viously, the Russians had opposed such a visit. According to Kyodo, a Japanese news service, the Soviet Union also asked for bank loans of $500 million to develop coal and natural gas resources in Siberia. Kyodo said the Russians outlined plans to exploit coal mines in Yaktak in north-

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

Lockheed Unit Develops Power Cell Lockheed Aircraft reports that its subsidiary. Lockeed Missile & Space Co., has developed a cell that can produce electric power "greatly exceeding that of conventional batteries." Lockheed says one possible application of the cell would be eventually to power electric vehicles, but n more immediate application is as a compact marine power source. The company adds that defense agencies have shown interest in this application." Lockheed says the cell is fueled with water and an alkali metal such as sodium or lithlum. Where water is freely available the power cell can generate up to 100 times the electrical power per pound as the conventional lead-acid storage battery.

Litton Takeover of Adler Backed

A Pederal Trade Commission examiner has ordered dismissal of a complaint challenging the 1969 takeover of West German typewiter manufacturer Triumph Adler by Litton Industries. The examiner found that Litton acquired Triumph Adler as the only realistic alternative to closing its financially-troubled U.S. subsidiary Royal-McBee, "The evidence shows conclusively that the acquisition of Triumph Adler has not lessened competition nor does it have any prob-ability of lessening competition," the examiner said. British Auto Sales Rise in January

Sales of cars in Britain rose 35 percent to 137,480 in January from a year earlier, with imports taking 16 percent of the total figures released by the Society of Motor Manufacturers & Traders show, British Leyland showed a marked improvement, taking 424 percent of the mar-ket compared with 39.8 percent a year earlier. Strike-bound Chrysler had 8.9 percent of the market, down from 11.2 percent, and Vaurhall Motors' share slipped to 7.7 from 9.9 percent. Import sales rose 54 percent to 24,854 units. Among the major imported cars. Volkswagen was the only company to note a decline in market penetration and sales, dropping to 23 percent of the market from 3.5 percent a year earlier.

Transcanada Pipeline Foreseen

A pipeline to carry natural gas from the Arctic islands to southern markets probably will be built across Canada to Toronto or Montreal, according to Charles Hetherington, president of Panarctic Oils of Calgary. He says the pipeline Panaretae Cils of Calgary. He says the pipeline will be about 2,700 miles long and cost several billion dollars. Panaretic is a consortium comprising the Canadian government and private companies. A pipeline to Toronto or Montreal would take between two and three years to build and would have to be at least 48 inches in diameter with a capability of carrying 3 billion cubic feet of gas a day, Mr. Retherington says.

BAT Eyes East European Nation

British American Tobacco reports it is negotinting with an unnamed East European country on the possibility of manufacturing its cigarettes under license there. The report comes in BAT's annual report for the year ended Sept. 30. The company says the overall volume of cigarette sales rose by just under 2 percent while tobacco products turnover increased by more than 4 percent. The group earned pre-tax profit of $155 million on turnover of £16 billion, compared with 1970 figures of £160 million and £1.67 billion respectively.

Carry Mixed Bag of Money, Machinery, Marxism

Russians Making Inroads in Latin America

NEW YORK, Feb. 22 (AP-DJ). -Soviet salesmen, carrying a mixed bag of money, machinery and Marxism, are knocking more persistently on Latin America's doors—and few are being slammed in their faces.

As a result, 1972 promises to be a banner year for Soviet traders in the region. Though still minuscule when measured against total trade with foreign nations, Russian dealings with Latin America this year are ex-pected to soar to $200 million— double the total of 1971.

The trade offensive is not prompted by such positives as the region's off and mineral riches. It is drawn by negatives -souring inflation, critical shortployment, slow growth, a multi-tude of political and social woes, diminishing U.S. aid and a steady and growing dilution of U.S. influence and interest.

So far, the Russians have tasted greatest success in Chile, Peru and Bolivia whose governments have moved hardest against U.S. business interests. Some others are mapping regulations designed to rid them of U.S. economic domination.

. But there have been some failures, too. Venezuela is not keen on trading with the Russians, mainly because of its oil riches and fear of Communist influence. Ecuador's pact with Russia mandates hard currency payments rather than barter. making trade nearly non-existent. Although Moscow is trying hard, mission, its trade with Mexico is minimal

To be sure, there were serious obstacles in the way of greater trade. Latin executives cite a lack of trading tradition between their region and Russia and unfamiliarity with Soviet products and equipment as two such bar-

EEC Plans New Talks on Money Union

BRUSSELS, Feb. 22 (AP-DJ). ~EEC ministers plan a series of recetings ending in mid-March designed to renew efforts to achieve economic and monetary

One of the key immediate results of the meetings is expected to be a decision to narrow the exchange margins among EEC currencies so that their values cannot alter from base exchange rates with each other by more than about 2.25 percent, compared with 4.5 percent at present.

The decisions are expected to be taken in consultation with Britain, Ireland, Denmark and Norway, in line with procedures established for the period until they are to become members on

As a first step in this direction, foreign ministers of the candidate countries will meet with KEC foreign ministers Monday, it was announced today. The meeting is expected to deal almost exclusively with plans for a 10nation summit meeting next sutumn.

But in less formal contacts, notably at the lunch that will follow the meeting, the ministers are expected to discuss such other important matters as economic and monetary union, which will be the main item on the agenda of the two-day EEC for-eign ministers meeting beginning Monday afternoon.

The foreign ministers are not expected to make any decisions. These are being reserved for a major council meeting, tentatively eduled for March 16-17, of foreign, finance and farm min-

The agriculture ministers are taking part because the common farm policy has been upset by floating exchange rates and the border taxes that have been set up to compensate for the de facto revaluations that have taken place. The agriculture ministers also want a voice in revising the unit of account in which farm prices are set.

And there are fewer complaints about faulty merchandise. Russian cars, while far from perfect, are running better than before, the tractors are tilling away, industrial machinery causes fewer problems and prefabricated houses seem quite habitable.

Russia's most recent sales to the region include 7,500 tractors to Chile, $31 million of generators Brazil; tin mining-machinery and two smelters to Bolivia; and the building and equipping of a $60 - million fishing complex in

Some deals in the offing include the sale, jointly with some satellites, of 40,000 tractors to Chile over the next two years: region-wide merchandising of the Yak-40, a stubby little 27-par senger jet; and bidding to build Latin America's biggest hydroelectric plant on the Brazil-Argentina border.

Brazil uses a half credit-balf barter arrangement to pay for its purchases, sending to Russia shoes, coffee and sugar. Bolivia uses credits mainly. Peru pays with credits plus fishmeal, minerals and services to Russian vessels calling at its ports. Colombia exports coffee and has cash left

What the Russians are most anxious to avoid is having to undertake a major rescue opera-

Cuba, whose entire economy hinges on aid, milked Moscow for $750 million last year and now owes Russia more than $4 billion, a sum it is unlikely to ever repay.

Now Chile's economy is deteriorating rapidly and is starting to show some of the same danger signals as seen in Cuba.

Chile is struggling to refinance more than $3 billion in foreign debts, it is groping in the dark trying to administer its nationalized copper mines, it is buffeted by rampant inflationary pressures and it is finding it harder to feed its protein-starved popula-

Russia is doing its best to provide Chile with self-belp projects, but it is having to give more direct aid every day. It has agreed to lend Chile $50 million in hard currency to finance imports from the West and just sent a high-level mission to Santiago to study specific projects on which Chile could spend $90 million in Russian credits. In addition, Russia loaned Chile three deep-sea fishing trawlers to help boost the country's catch and thus offset a severe meat shortege that has rationed meat sales to only three days a week

But Russia is finding some unwelcome competition for Chile's costly affections—China. Peking, which is mounting a trade drive of its own, just granted Chile a long-term, interest-free loan of $65 million. At the loan-signing caremony, Chinese diplomats smiled at their Chilean counterparts and said, "There are no strings attached."

Volcker Urges Quick Action On Gold Bill

Economists See Need For Early Dollar Talks

By Edwin L. Dale Jr.
WASHINGTON, Feb. 22 (NYT).

The Treasury Department urged Congress today to pass speedily and without amendment the legislation formally devaluing the dollar by raising the official price of gold to $38 an ounce. Paul A. Volcker, undersecretary of the Treasury for monetary af-fairs, told the Senate Banking Committee that the legislation "in no way changes our view that the monetary role of gold should cootinue to diminishtrend well established in recent years." He said the United States had accepted a higher gold price for the dollar in the recent monetary negotiations because it concluded that "we could obtain an earlier and more favorable resoiution of the currency realign-ment question."

Mr. Voicker said the time might come when Coogress should give the President "standby authority to change the official par value of the dollar by some additional amount, perhaps 10 percent, but only as part of a longer-term world movetary reform that would require subsequent legisla-

Noting that it would probably take two years before the deficit in the U.S. balance of payments was corrected, and also two years to negotiste full-fledged monetary reform, Mr. Volcker added, "If that implies two years for a full-scale decision on convertibility of the dollar, I accept that implication."

Warning From Experts

But in a related development iwo leading international monetary economie's told a separate congressional committee that the recent Smithsonian agreement on currency exchange rates was in danger of breaking down unless there is early joint action by the leading countries to restore at least partial convertibility of the dollar.

The economists testifying before the Joint Economic Com-mittee were Edward Bernstein, now a private consultant, and Robert Triffin of Yale University. Their testimony was remarkable, both emphasizing the urgency of early resumption of negotiations and the assumption by the United States of "responsibility" for ng the dollar some form.

Prof. Triffin said the "dangerous procrastination" in resumhig negotiations "is a sure road to a new crisis" as other countries hesitate to purchase "in-convertible paper dollars," which would be necessary to defend the new pattern of exchange rates. Mr. Bernstein said, "As things stand now, no country can know for certain whether it will be able one year from now to use its dollar reserves to make pay-ments to Europe or, if so, at what approximate rate of exchange . . . Is it any wonder that some countries with nearly all of their reserves in dollars feel that they must diversify their reserves, not to escape from the dollar so much, but to escape from an inconvertible dollar?"

He proposed a technical plan under which the dollar would be partially convertible during the present "inferim" period, but the United States would be safeguarded against hig losses of its present-diminished supply of monetary

New Orders for Durable Goods Editions of dollars, seasonally adjusted (New Senes)

U.S. Orders For Durables Rise 7.9%

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22 (Reuters),-New orders for durable goods rose 7.9 percent in January, with most of the upturn due to extensions in large shipbuilding contracts, the Commerce Department said today.

The increase, to a seesonally-adjusted $31.69 billion, was the largest since the 9.4 percent gain in December, 1970. It followed a revised 13 percent decline in December, 1971.

The backlog of unfilled orders rose 2 percent to a seasonally-adjusted $76.56 billion. This follows a 0.4 percent increase in December and was the largest gain since the 2.6 percent recorded in June of last year.

Durable goods sales registered strong 4.3 percent rise to $33.19 billion after declining 0.8 percent in December. It was the largest rise since the December, 1970, gain of 5.4 percent.

The Commerce Department noted that most of the increase in unfilled oredrs was due to shipbuilding and railroad equipment. There were also noted "significant increases" in January sales in the transportation equipment and machinery industries.

increases in new orders included primary metals industries and

Price Rigging Draws New Curbs on OTC

NEW YORK, Feb. 22 (AP-DJ). The governing board of the National Association of Securities Dealers (NASD), officially confirming its concern over possible manipulation of some over-the-counter (OTC) new issues, has proposed a rule aimed at curbing the volatility of certain types of "speculative" initial offerings and discouraging "improper activity" in connection with their trading.

The disclosure that the board is circulating the rule to its members for comment comes a week after it was learned that investigatars are probing the possibility that the prices of some OTC stocks that had been high flyers until recently may have been ar-tificially inflated. Names of the stocks, securities firms and individuals involved have not been disclosed.

The investigation has intensified in the wake of the collapses earlier this month of two newizsue underwriters-S.J. Salmon & Co. and JNT Investors Ioc.

Gordon S. Macklin, NASD president, said in a letter to membors that "some underwriters have subsidized or had agreements with market makers which have created an artificial demand for the securities [offered]. This was accomplished by maintaining strict control over the supply of shares in the market by refusing to deliver [certificates] to pur-chasers in the offering and by discouraging or refusing to accept sell orders entered by their own customers.

Controls Sought On Transatlantic Charter Fares

GENEVA, Feb. 22 (AP-DJ).— The International Air Transport Association (IATA) has asked European governments to fix charter sirling fares.

The appeal was contained in a 35-page report submitted to the European Civil Aviation Conference (ECAC1, which will conference (ECAC1, which will conference (ECAC1). sider the issue at a three-day meeting in Paris starting to-

The report implies that without belp, some scheduled airlines will be driven out of business on North Atlantic routes, which account for about one-third of the international airline business in terms of passengers and distance

The report said: • Charter airlines increased their total traffic 33.5 percent last year, but the increase for scheduled sirlines was only 4.5

6 Charter airlines accounted for 33 percent of the North Atlantic traffic last year, up from 26 percent in 1970. • Charter airlines will have 50 percent of the North Atlantic traffic by 1974 under present growth rates.

Bankruptcy Threat

Commenting on the report in a letter to ECAC, Knut Hammarskjold, IATA director general, said that without controls "the only solution to avoid bankruptcy would be for some scheduled airlines to abandon scheduled transportation and divert their resources to serving the public in a manner similar to that of charter carriers."

Economic Reform in Sicily Makes Jobless Rate Rise

PALERMO. Sicily (NYT).— Formidable efforts to bring new industry to Sicily.
under way for the last dozen years, are backfiring.
It was expected that the island's traditional industries would decline it was not foreseen, however, that overall employment in Sicily would suffer as it has.

"It has been a problem of speed," said Giuseppe Cosen-tino, an economist with the Institute for Assistance to the Institute for Assistance to the Development of the Mezro-ziorno. Simply put, the number of jobs lost by the crisis in traditional industries has not been offset by the new plants. Similion in 1981 to 1.3 million in 1971, and unemployment rose from 42,000 to ment rose from 42,000 to

Before the first movements of industrialization began between 1957 and 1961, "conditions in Sirily were better than in the rest of the Mezzo-glorno (the south of Italy)." Mr. Cosentino said. The islands five million inhabi-lants. Were supported albeit. tants were supported-albeit on a low standard-by agriculture, food-processing plants. wood mills, mines and machine shops.

Building Boom The industrialization created a building boom in public ed a building boom in public works and housing," Mr. Cosentino said. "Meanwhile, the traditional industries suffered.
They didn't modernize, and the increasing new industrialtzation—and the infrastructure that was built to create new investments—brought all of Italy closer together." A great influx of competitive goods

"Another problem has been the resistance of people to change." Mr. Cosentino said. "Sixty percent of the working population in Sicily is engaged in traditional industry, and they resist changing their living and working habits. Con-sequently, the position of Sicily in comparison to the rest of southern Italy has deteriorated." tion which the government poll of West German industrialists shows that most expect an economic upture, though they slowdown. They also said they are afraid inflation might remain exand will induce other employ-ment in building and services. To revitable one of ficily's traditional, but ailing, indus-tries, mining, three years ago the government created Ente Minerario Siciliano (EMS). Its aim is to reorganize all the island's mining operations— such as phosphate, sulphur, asphalt and marble—and to integrate them restically, with on-site processing.

The principal problem, both technologically and economically, has been with sulphur mining. The methods of mining sulphur in Sicily are archaic; the sulphur is so deep that its extraction is costly, and the quality is in-terior to that being mined elsewhere in the world.

Sulphur mining nonetheless has continued because it has been impossible to dismiss or relocate the mine workers and because the mine owners have been receiving a government subsidy toward the low market price for their inferior prod-sentino said, is to liquidate the sulphur operations and, by baying reorganized all of the island's mining operations under a single agency, to absorb the labor force into other work Much of that new work is being fashioned through a major EMS investment plan that is being aided by other institutions and companies.

It calls for an $800,000 out lay, of which almost $100,000 bas already been pegged for five plants that will employ more than 35,000 persons in the production of barium, sodium sulphate, potassium sulphate and other mining products, as well as the manufacture of polyethylene bags and synthetic leather.

The designs of EMS may well be the answer for Sicily's mining industry. But the island is still a long way from receiving the kind of investment it is trying to attract to beal the blows its traditional revenue-makers have already suffered.

BRIDGE

By Alan Truscott

The player who wants to find the right opening lead must give careful thought to the bidding. If West had done so in the disgramed deal, and had drawn the correct inference, he could have defeated the contract by two tricks.

When West opened one spade, North passed, the orthodox move with a strong hand containing length and strength in the oppoments' suit. East raised to two spades, with a hand on which most players would prefer one no-trump, and the bidding came back to North

A double at this point would have been slightly ambiguous; a delayed take-out double, lacking the strength for action on the first round? Or a penalty double, springing the trap of a trap pass on the previous round? Without any partnership agreement, South can usually tell by inspecting his spade length: if he has a single-ton or a void, the double is for penalties.

However, North chose to bid three diamonds and made an imaginative raise to game when South bid three hearts. Against four hearts, West made the routine choice of a spade, and the declarer had no trouble making

South won the first trick with the spade queen from dunmy and discarded a diamond. His next lead was dummy's singleton club, and when West won he shifted to a trump. South played dummy's queen and overtook with the king, ruffed another club in dummy and cashed the spade ace. That gave him a total of 10 tricks: seven trumps, including one ruff, two spades and one diamond.

West should have asked himself what sort of hand North had to vulnerable at the three level. North most have strength, and by far the most likely reason was that he had a "trap" hand with length and strength in spades.

This, together with diamond length and a few hearts, would mean a major threat of club ruffs in the dummy. So West should have led a trump. Six trump tricks and two aces then would have been South's limit.

POE POE POE POE POE POE

By Daniel Hoffman. 334 pps. Doubleday, $7.25.

certainly written a cute little book. No less dignified a figure than Richard Wilbur termed it madly breezy. I would be content to call it chatty, myself, but then perhaps in Richard Wilbur's life this kind of chatter constitutes a mad breeze. At any rate, it all began many years ago, when Prof. Hoffman rashly bought an unopened box of books at a country auction. On opening it, he discovered that he had acquired the 17volume University of Virginia edition of the works of Edgar Allan Poe. Since then, he has been reading the 17 volumes, and what we have in "Poe Poe Poe Poe Poe Poe" is a collection of his own notes on his reading. It reads very much like someone's table talk, only it is all table talk about E.A. Poe. Prof. Hoffman doesn't really have a thesis to propose, which is just as well. He is a humane and quick-minded fellow, he enjoys reading Poe, and he believes that Edgar Allan was an interesting man and a very un-even but quite interesting writer. He takes each major piece of Poe's writing as he comes to it and analyzes it good-humoredly: sometimes he is a little yapld, but most of the time he is rather trenchant and manages to draw some reasonably. ilhuminating connection between Poe and his antecedents, or his sors, or his critics, or life in general,

The one professorial cuteness he commits is to make Poe into two characters, one of whom he calls Edgarpoe and the other of whom he calls Hoaviepoe. Edgarpoe was the serious artist, the man who strained to create Beauty as a relief from the dreadful suffering of his life. Hoariepoe was non-serious, a literary trickster, bamboozling editors and public with little games and parodies and all manner of sleight-of-hand.

It is probably true that there were two sides to Poe; there may have been several sides, but however many there were Prof. Hoffman's labelling quickly begins to grate on the nerves, and it continues to grate throughout most of a 334-page book. It constitutes excessive cuteness. Prof. Hoffman's boldest critical foray is in regard to "Eureka," a little-read prose poem which he claims is Poe's masterpiece. He also says nice things about "The Fall of the House of Usher," and goes on to have a psychoanalytic critics who have made sport with Poe. One of the most charming of the many points these critics have raised is Leslie Fielder's claim that the white sea around the black island in the "Narrative of Ar-thur Gordon Pym" represents milk breast-fed the infant Eddy by a black mammy.

Prof. Hoffman is generally fair in his treatment of Poe scholar-

DROF. Daniel Hoffman has ship to date, but I think, in tone at least, he slights Marie Bonaparie, whose psychoanalytic study is certainly one of the most penetrating efforts to sort out the labyrinthine confusions of Poe's life and work.

He does full justice to Poe's professionalism, pointing out that he scraped together some kind of living by his writing at a time when a literary career was an extremely precarious thing for a man of no means to undertake. He did this by concentrating on four broadly popular genres. Be Gothic tale, the story of experience, the science-fiction story and the detective story, and if what he did with each of them was not high art it was a gallant effort, made by a man whose life was a daily nightman,

One should finally make that mild point against Prof. Hoffman's madly breezy tone. It is admirably readable, refreshingly informal and unacademic, but it finally clashes somewhat with the material being presented. Poe was a haunted and miserable man, and very little sense of this misery and hauntedness gets to us through Prof. Hoff-man's tone. If it were strictly a literary essay this would not matter, but it is partly a biographical essay as well, and it would have been well if it had conveyed a bit more vividly what its subject's life was really like.

Elsewhere, Kanses State moved into a tie for first place in the Big Eight Conference by hammering Oklahoma State, 74-52. St. Francis held a 46-45 half-time lead, but that didn't last long. Buss Lee, who scored 22 points in the game, powered a 50-point second half as the Thundering Herd literally ran swey from the underdogs. Joe Hashaky led the losers with 23. Southwestern Louisiana, en-joying top ten status for the first time this year, got a 41-point performance from Dwight Lamar, the nation's leading scorer.

Lemer, boosting his average to 36.4, connected on 15 of 31 field-goal attempts and added 11 points from the free-throw line. He also had eight assists. Roy Ebron also turned in a powerhouse performance, scor-ing 36 points and grabbing 24 rebounds for the Ragin' Cajuna. Scott McCandlish delivered two free throws with four seconds left to give Virginia its triumph over tough Clemson.

The Cavaliers' crucial victory gave them a 19-3 won-lost mark and broke a two-game losing streak. It also boosted them back into first place in the Atlantic Coast Conference. Kennicky lost an early lead, then stopped Georgia in the second half. The losers scored only 15 points in the first 15 minutes of the second half, Jim Andrews led Kentucky with 32 points and helped the Wildcats break away from a 36-

At 1:30 am. on Jan. 2, the day following the Miami success over Baltimore for the AFC title, President Nixon telephoned the coach, Don Shuls, to congratulate him.

The President said he thought a "down-and-in" pass to Paul Warfield might be a good play to use against Dallas in the Super Bowl. The telephone call and the President's suggestion gained wide circulation and com-

Santo Is Emotional Brusque and defient, Durocher has squabbled with virtually all his players during three stormy decades as a manager.

But his higgest sin," Aguirre said, "is his tremendous desire to win. He puts a line-up card on the dugout wall; he doesn't think he has to explain to a guy why he's been dropped from fourth to seventh in the batting order. Nobody ever explained that to him when he was with the Gas House Gang, and he never explained it to guys he managed with the Dodgers and the Giants; he just did it. Play-ers accepted it then, but not now. Ronnie Santo is an emotional Eid. When you don't but him fourth, he feels it. That's my job, to go to these kids and explain why Leo's doing this or Durocher's philosophy always has been that "nice guys finish last," or at least second. Aguirre "Like in '69, in the permant race with the Mets, when Jerry Koosnan drilled Santo with a pitch and Tommie Agee took out Don Kessinger with a big slide, I couldn't believe it. We didn't go after them," Agutrre said. "I nt think Leo could believe it. either. I think losing that pennant hurt him deeper than anything because the guys didn't go after tt."

Not that Aguirre will be involved with Durocher's manipulation of a game likeli. "Once the game starts, Leo is still the best manager in base-ball," Aguirre said. "He's five moves ahead of the other manager. I know managers. I play-ed for a dozen of them. Some want to win. Others just want to keep their jobs. Leo wants to win.

So does Aguirre, because he never was on a World Series winner.

"Our idea on the Cubs is let's excite these guys, let's motivate them," he said. "The principle is the same-wear the World Series ring on your ringer. World Series money doesn't mean that much to most kids today. They got money. And you spend the money anyway. But that ring means something in any sport. I've seen Wayne Walker of the Lions cry because he's never got a Super Bowl ring. I never got a World Series ring. I never got an All-Star ring." In 1962, when his 2.21 earned-run average led the American League for the Detroit Tigers, Aguirre was chosen for the All-Star game. "Until that year, they gave All-Star rings, but Yogi Berra had eight All-Star rings so they stopped. The new guys didn't have eight All-Star rings, they didn't have any. But a World Series ring, that's really something. If we win, we'll turn Chicago inside out. I want a parade down. Michigan Avenue, I want confetti, want champagne splashing in the clubhouse."

And when the champagne is splashing, Hank Aguirre will be going from player to player, saying, "Leo wants to thank you."

Cards Acquire Anderson, Deal Lane to Packers

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 22 (AP) .- The St. Louis Cardinals announced today that they have acquired Donny Anderson from the Green Bay Packers for MacArthur Lane. Anderson, primarily a running back, was a future draft choice of the Packers in 1965. Liquori's Toughest Foe Is His 'Fear of Losing'

By Neil Amdur

NEW YORK, Feb. 22 (NYT) .-In a startling moment of selfanalysis, Marty Liquori ecknowledged yesterday that the "fear of losing" has haunted his competitive track and field program this year.

"The only reason I was putting off running in the Garden was that I was afraid to lose," the world's top-rated miler told the weekly luncheon of the Track Writers' Association of New York yesterday in a special phone hookway to put things to a test is to get out there and run."

Liquori, 22, is entered in the mile run at the Amateur Athletic Union indoor championships Friday night at Madison Square Garden. It will be his only appearance in an invitation race at the Garden this season, after a popular three-year career high-lighted by 13 consecutive Cup triumphs there.

Liquori is considered one of the sport's most competitive and combative runners, the picture of confidence on the track. His admission that "I was getting a little gun-shy" about accepting invitation races earlier this season reaffirms other trademarkshis frankness and candor.

After an undefeated year of mile races in 1971, the Cedar Grove, N.J., Olympian developed foot trouble last October. The injury, he said, caused him to miss 30 days of training and "set me back six weeks" in his timetable for the Munich Olympics which start in August.

In discussing his reason for entering an AAU mile field that includes two of the season's strongest performers, Byron Dyce and Dave Wottle, Liquori alluded to his collegiate days at Villanova. "Besides dedication and discipline . . . sometimes you have to do things you don't want to do," he said. "Sometimes, Jumbo (Villanova's coach, Jumbo Jim Elliott) would put me in a race that I didn't necessarily want to run, Some athletes get gun-shy ebout losing, but Jumbo always felt you had to stand up to these challenges." Liquori said he felt "the fear of losing" has hindered many prominent athletes, particularly in a sport as individualistic as track, and field.

Long-Range Thoughts "There are days when you don't feel like running," he said. "Sometimes you feel you have to for other reasons. I don't think I should worry about my reputsin this race. I'm thinking more long-range."

Dallas' Thomas Put on Probation For Five Years

NEW YORK, Feb. 23 (NYT) .-Duane Thomas, the silent star of the Dallas Cowboys, received a five-year suspended sentence vesterday after pleading guilty in Greenville, Texas, to possession of marijuana:

Under Texas law, Thomas could have been sent to prison for a period ranging from two years to

Because he pleaded guilty, Thomas has the status of a convicted felon, which means he must be assigned a probation officer. The judge indicated Thomas would have no trouble traveling with the team, however. Judge Hollis Garmon of the 93d District Court is expected to appoint one of the Cowboy players as Thomas's probation officer. Westing a conservative brown suit in contrast to his usual mod clothing, Thomas heard Judge Garmon say, "You are a young person and have the potential of great future. I am probably going to grant you a probated sentence but we will recess the court so that a probation officer can make a few phone calls Spont Aon".

Thomas, who barely spoke to his coaches, teammates and re-porters during the last season, answered, "Yes, sir, your honor," three times when addressed by the judge. That was all he said.

Liquori has run only one invitation mile all winter, a 4:09.3 third-place performance in Toronto. By contrast, Dyce and Wottle have run and won races around 4:01 and 4:02

How important is the race, Liquori was asked. "They're all important, of course," the three-time national collegiate champion said. "I don't want to give up this streak with-

Pietrangeli Finds Youth In Clean Air

after having feuded with the Italian Tennis Federation, Pic-trangeli called on his 17 years' experience, including 161 Davis Cup matches, to turn back Bob McKinley, 21, of St. Ann, Mo., 6-3, 6-1.

"Nice playing, Nicky," someone said.

"He let me play nice," Pietrangeli answered. "He didn't attack and he gave me time. I let him beat himself."

W the boys—"running dogs of American imperialism," as we think of ourselves nowadays—had settled around the hig table at the Riack Bird Cafe when, naturally, China came

Wherever go in Washington these days, China comes up like dawn out of thunder across the bay, and it usually makes for a ponderous lunch. so when Egmont looked into his beer and wondered ponderously whether any benefits could possibly result from President Nixon's journey, even the corned heef sandwiches began to look depressed.

'Of course there will be benefits," Milbank said. "For one thing, the reporters will not have enough news to satisfy either the presses or the tubes. They will have to pad. This means we will all get a lot of news stories about how good Chinese food is.

"When this subject has been exhausted, reporters desperate for stories will go looking for chow mein and chop sucy, so that they can do amusing features comparing the chow mein and chop suey of China with the chow mem and chop sucy they have eaten in the Catskills.

"They will discover—and what is better, they will report—that there is no chow mein or chop sucy to he found in China, and that Chinese headwaiters laugh when you order chow mein and chop suey and say: 'Only Amerchow mein and chop This news, upon reaching America, will make chow mein and chop suey so un-fashionable that they will disappear from menus all over the

"That," said Milbank, "is my idea of a benefit."

Egmont frowned. "I was hopiug we could talk seriously," he "Speaking ponderously for a minute, the economic issues involved seem to me to amount to very little when compared-" "Very little?" cried Tom Venus-

WASHINGTON.-A bunch of you're talking about, Egmont!" "Do you see important economic consequences then?" asked Bill Apassionata.

"Use your head," said Venus-erg. "What is the first immediate result of every big-time politician's visit to a hitherto ignored country, dating back to Napoleon's visit to Egypt, Raleigh's trip to America and, very prob-ably, Cyrus's trip to Babylon?" "A boon to fashion" Bill said.

"Exactly," said Venusberg. Every woman north of the poverty line immediately wants the new Egyptian couture, or the Indian look, or the Babylonian style. By next week women all over America will be planning to adopt the new Chinese line And what is the Chinese line? Quilts sewed up into pants and jackets. Can anybody here think of a cheaper wardrobe for his wife than a pile of quilts? The President's trip is the most beneficial thing that has happened to the beer budget since home brew." * * *

Egmont seemed irritated. "Be perious," he said. question is peace." "The real "Oh, the immediate benefits to the peace seem obvious to me," said Brill. "Now that China has become the in place to go, all the presi-dential candidates will have to add it to their travel itineraries along with Ireland, Italy and Israel. This will keep each of them out of the country for at least an additional week. If we figure that there are now 25 presidential candidates, this means we get 25 weeks of peace from the China trip alone. That'e almost half a year."

"It could revolutionize dinner parties," said Irving. "When word gets back to America that in China everybody-ahsolutely everybody—eats rice, American hostesses will probably quit serving it at buffet dinners and put out something a little more exotic, potatoes maybe. This trip could bring back the potato."

"That's silly," said Egmont.
"Yes," we all agreed in a satisfied way, for we had finished our lunch and survived another social event in Washington in the month of February in the year 1972 without having to

Prof. Karl Erick Fichtelius, left, and Sverre Sjölander, with a dolphin. Their book, "Man, Sperm Whale and the Tree of Knowledge," is soon to be translated into English.

Will Whales Have The Last Laugh?

By Jan Sjöby

STOCKHOLM (IHT).—Is home saptens, as a majority of the members of the species tend to believe, the end product of

Prof. Karl Erik Fichtelius, Swedish histologist and physician, is not quite sure. In a recently published book, "Manniskan, Kaskelotvalen och Kunskapens Träd" (Man, Sperm Whale and the Tree of Knowledge) he and co-author Sverre Sjölander, a zoologist specializing in dolphins, seriously question man's position as the most advanced and most intelligent species

The odonceti-the tooth whales-they believe, may wellturn out to be the crown of creation. Those remarkable animals. ranging from porpoise to sperm whale, show an almost incredible degree of adaptation to their environment.

Much of their argument hinges on the definition of intelligence.

"When we measure human intelligence we measure a series of capacities," writes Prof. Fitchelius, who has signed the chapters on cetacean physiology and psychology. "Different tests measure different capacities and the results can seldom be compared. Human standards of intelligence, obviously, cannot he directly applicable to other species whose modes of life call for entirely different capacities than ours."

Prof. Fichtelius says that if the brain-weight-to-bodyvolume ratio—a classic way of determining the intelligence of a species-holds water, the marmoset monkey of South and Central America must be the most intelligent animal on earth. The ratio the professor prefers to use is the one between the primitive brainstem and the cerebral cortex; where thinking is believed to occur. The tooth whales, it turns out, have more cerebral cortex tissue in relation to the brainstem than man. Does that mean that the sperm whale is more intelligent than man? Prof. Fichtelius would obviously like to answer that question but he can't. Mr. Sjölander elaborates on the intricate communications system of the whales—which may be a language rather than a mere system of signals: how dolphins apparently are able to transmit relatively complicated pieces of intelligence; how the humpbacked whale, as reported by American scientist Roger Payne, who has made a number of recordings of its "song," is able to communicate long-distance between places like Cape Horn and Spitzbergen. The message is sent at 110 decibels (roughly the noise level of a DC-8 at take-off) at a depth of 1,000 meters, where an "acoustic floor" allows soundwaves to glide over some 40,000 kilometers.

In an interview, Prof. Fichtelius commented on the findings of Dr. Payne:

"The humpback is a whalebone whale and he doesn't instinct or insight?

"Is it the song of the humpback or some other species of whale that has generated the sea stories about the songs of the mermaids in the great depths?" Prof. Fichtellus asked. "Sea lore of this type ought to be taken seriously, until we can prove that the old tars were lying. The best laugh is the last laugh—that's the theme of the book."

sperm whale—"the great question mark in biology." They note that physeter catodon is the biggest of the odontocetl, sometimes measuring more than 25 meters. A third of its body is forehead—an oil-filled cavity that has caused a great deal of discussion among marine biologists. The authors believe it is a sophisticated collector of sounds and echos, roughly like of the visual capacities of a normal human. But their hearing is about 20 times more sensitive and accurate.

A question is raised as to the intelligence of the whales. with all that cerebral cortex, why do the whales accept tha merciless slaughter that has gone on for the past century despite feeble attempts at international legislation? With their intellectual capacities and their adaptation to their watery environment, they should be able to keep away from the whalero says marriage of the future will not be a lifetime proposition. "In the past, a man and woman could be married 30 years and still have something to say to each other," Dr. Mead told a Family Structure Workhouse at the University of Iowa, "but this is not the way life is today, and it's reasonable that married individuals should have recurrent choice in their marriage." Parents of the future, she predicted, will be asked "if they want to take on the responsibility of child-bearing and if they decide emin-pearing and it they decide they do, they will be asked what makes them think they will be good parents. Furthermore, women will have an average of two children and they will not be "pressured into early mar-riage and long child-bearing." Society, added Dr. Mead, could not exist without children; in New Guinea in 1937, she pointed out, society did not want children and "it literally fell to pieces.

The Future Of Marriage
